1. Chapter 1: To the Singularity and Back

Chapter 1: To the Singularity and Back

Hello everyone. I started this story for three reasons. First, I owed a friend a big favor and he wanted me to pay him back through the writing of the following storyline. Second, I think having another project to work on fanfiction will be good for me. That way I can switch back and forth between stories depending on my mood and inspiration without taking such long hiatuses. And finally, I am doing it because after watching the Flash/Supergirl crossover, I am totally onboard with that ship and there isn't enough of it yet.

This first chapter is short but that was intentional. It was designed to test out the idea briefly and see if Karry fans out there would like to read more. If so, my friend and I already have outlines for more of the storyline just waiting to be finished. In other words, nice reviews could be the difference between a one-shot and a much longer story. **

Hope you all like this! Let's begin.

>The catastrophe ended abruptly.

From the entrance of S.T.A.R. Labs, the members of Team Flash looked up in confusion. Ronnie and Martin were about to merge into Firestorm to assist Barry with the singularity when suddenlyâ€¦the sky was clear again, as if nothing had happened. But something terrible had obviously happened. All the rubble and partially destroyed buildings scattered around the city were more than enough evidence of that.

"What just happened?" Caitlin wondered aloud.

"I don't know," Professor Stein said in bewilderment. "Mr. Allen succeeded in stabilizing the singularity but he couldn't have completely stopped it by himself."

"Wait," Joe said in alarm as he frantically looked around. "Where is Barry?"

Everyone search the area with their eyes but they saw no sign of Barry anywhere.

"Could he haveâ€¦" Ronnie trailed off and swallowed as he looked back up.

Iris gasped. "No, it can't be," She said in a small voice, her tears returning.

Joe had a shell shocked expression on his face as he hugged his daughter. The others didn't know what to say. They couldn't believe it. Barry Allenâ€¦The Flashâ€¦was dead?

Suddenly, familiar yellow lightning came from within S.T.A.R. Labs and the wind speed up around them. "Hey guys," Barry said with a wide smile. "Sorry I am late."

"Oh, my man!" Cisco said as he let out a sigh of relief. "Never scare us like that again."

The others voiced their agreement and in no time they were in a group hug, the dread finally draining from their bodies.

"But how did you do it?" Professor Stein asked curiously. "How did you stopped the wormhole?"

"Yeah, about that," Barry said as he scratch his neck awkwardly, "it's a very long story."

Joe frowned. "What are you talking about? You were gone no more than five minutes."

"Not quite," Barry said slowly as he bit his bottom lip.

The others waited for an explanation but it seemed like Barry didn't know where to begin. Eventually, he just shrugged. "It's better if I just show you," He ended up saying before waving his hand at the sky.

Suddenly a very fast figure blurred through the sky above them.

"Is that a drone?" Caitlin asked no one in particular.

Cisco tried to focus his vision on the approaching figure that looked blue from a distance. "It must be Ray in his A.T.O.M. suit."

And then, the flying figure landed in front of them and partially cracked the floor. The Team Flash members took an involuntary step backwards at the sudden vibration and stared at the newcomer in shock.

It was a beautiful woman with long blonde hair in a blue and red suit, a red cape and some strange symbol that looked like a big S inside a diamond. She smiled at them radiantly as her blue eyes light up.

"Nope," Barry said with a very pleased grin as he put his arm around her. "It's my girlfriend!"

There was absolute silence for exactly 2 seconds. Then their eyes comically widened at the same time and their mouths opened and closed in confused stammering. Before they could go on, the new girl giggled pleasantly, clearly amused with the situation. She then leaned on Barry's shoulder with a very happy expression. Barry held her closer as he looked at her with affection and whatever questions his friends were about to voice out abruptly died on their throats. None of them had ever seen Barry so content, not even Iris and Joe. After a few seconds that seemed like hours, Barry looked back at the group.

"Don't worry, I'll explain everything inside," Barry promised. "But for now allow me to introduce you all to Kara Danvers. When she has that suit on though, you can use her superhero name: Supergirl."

More will come if the reception is good so, hopefully, until next time!

2. Chapter 2: Catching Up

Chapter 2: Catching Up

First of all, I want to thank _everyone _for all the reviews, favorites and followings. My inbox has been constantly getting positive news thanks to you all and that makes me smile. So, to show you all my gratitude, here is a fast update! **

Which brings me to my second announcement. I work for most of the day so I can only dedicate a small part of it to writing. The good news is that by planning ahead with my outlines it gets easier to find good places inside the plotline to split the content in parts. So, until further notice, future chapters will be somewhat short. Sorry if that gets annoying but that will be the easiest way for me to update at a fast rate. When I try to make long chapters it can easily take me weeks to find enough timely inspiration before an update. This way you won't have to wait as long.

I present the next chapter to you, my amazing readers. Enjoy!

>Joe West had a face of profound puzzlement and the others in S.T.A.R. Labs weren't far behind. Iris was scratching her forehead as if trying to focus on what she just heard from Barry and failing utterly.

"Come again?" She asked in a bewildered voice.

Barry smirked in amusement. "What part was not clear?" He asked as his girlfriend continued to hold his hand.

"I think," Caitlin said with a calculated pause, "it was the part about you spending several months on a parallel version of earth in about five minutes over here."

"Ah, that," Barry said with a chuckle. "Well, that was just the short version. Any questions?"

Cisco and Stein shared a brief glance before looking back at Barry. "Is the Multiverse theory a proven fact, then?" The professor asked.

"Totally," Barry nodded. "But Kara's Earth vibrates at a different frequency than this one and likely any other Earth by that matter. That's why our worlds can't see or touch each other through normal means, even if they may exists next to one another."

As if on cue, the members of Team Flash looked back at the stunning woman that was holding hands with Barry. Soon enough, Cisco grinned like a fanboy. "Well, it seems Central City has a new power couple. Do you have any metahuman powers other than flying, _Supergirl_?" He asked, chuckling after emphasizing her nickname.

"Oh for sure," Kara responded with a wide smile. "But first I should probably let you know that I am not a metahuman. I definitely look close enough and I have been living on my universe's earth half my life, but I am actually a Kryptonian from a distant planet on my universe called Krypton."

"Whoa!" Cisco shrieked in excitement as the others gasped in shock. "You are saying you are an alien with superpowers!?"

"Mm-hmm," Kara mumble with a knowing grin.

"Oh, Barry, my friend," Cisco said with a dramatic tone of voice and a trembling smirk, "Allow me to be the first to congratulate you on getting such an awesome girlfriend," He said and laughed gleefully as he hi-fived the speedster. "You really hit the multiversal lottery."

"Don't I know it," Barry said as he looked at Kara fondly. She smiled back at him cheerfully before turning to Cisco.

"To answer part of your question, I also have super-strength, I can freeze object with my breath, I have heatvision, I can fly and run at supersonic speeds, oh and yeah, I am bullet proof," She announced, her smirk widening as all of their jaws dropped. She then squeezed Barry's globed hand as she tilted her head in his direction. "My amazing boyfriend is still the fastest one of us, though."

Barry chuckled with contentment. "Don't worry, I am sure one day you will catch up, Girl of Steel."

She laughed with a voice he found adorable. "Yeah, just you watch and wait, Scarlet Speedster."

There was a brief silence in which the onlookers were processing the sheer might of Barry's girlfriend and plainly noticed the affection they had for each other.

"You two are so getting a shipping name," Cisco muttered before sitting down on a chair. "After my head stops spinning with possibilities."

Kara cracked up at that and Barry followed. She looked back at her boyfriend, clearly amused. "He is even more entertaining than you made him out to be."

"That's our Cisco," Barry replied with a knowing smile. "Always exceeding our expectations."

Joe shook his head in wonder at everything he has been hearing. The he briefly looked at Iris and sighed softly before approaching his adopted son. "We are definitely talking about all of this in length at dinner," He said sternly. Then he smiled widely and clapped Barry in the back. "But that can wait. Come here you two," He said jovially as he pulled his son and his girlfriend into a big hug.

The couple happily obliged, smiling the entire time.

"Whoa," Joe said with a sudden flinch. "That's definitely a strong grip you got there, young lady."

"Oh, I am sorry!" Kara yelped nervously as she jumped back. "It's just thatâ€¦it's so great to be finally here and meet you all," She said as she started to tear up a little.

Barry leaning in towards her and whispered something in her ear. Her face light up like a Christmas tree on the spot. "Have I ever told you that you are the best boyfriend ever?"

Barry smiled like someone who has found peace after searching his whole life for it. "Yes, but I will never get tired of hearing you say that."

"Well said, Barry Allen," She said fondly before giving him a quick but passionate kiss.

Then she froze and blushed when she realized she had an audience. Barry simply held her hand and she visibly relaxed. Looking at his friends and family, he spoke up. "If anyone wants to hear more, meet us back home in about an hour. Coast City pizza is on me!" He added before turning back.

And with that, he guided the woman he loves into a new world full of possibilities.

>My fluff writing skills have are a little rusty so I hope this chapter wasn't a letdown. At any rate, I will see you soon. Hope you enjoyed the read and if you did, please review!

3. Chapter 3: Hunted

Chapter 3: Hunted

So, a summarized version of the events that take place in this chapter were going to be the final scene of the previous one but then my laptop's battery ran out and what I had for that scene was lost. So, this chapter focuses entirely on that section of the plotline, with a few expanded details. Hope you enjoy because this chapter is very important for the long term of the plot, even though Barry and Kara aren't in it. Now, read on and enjoy the special guest characters from the other corners of the Arrow-verse!

Disclaimer: I don't own the characters of the Arrow-verse. That includes Mari McCabe and her heroic alter ego, Vixen.

>Mari McCabe couldn't shake the feeling that she was being followed. There was nothing around her that looked suspicious but the passive animal instincts she had had grown accustomed to since activating her magical totem were screaming impending danger to the back of her neck.

She stopped her walk through the sidewalks of Detroit once more to look back. The last rays of sunset didn't show her anyone. Biting her bottom lip, she discreetly tapped into the power of the totem around her neck to gain the powerful tracking scent of a wolf and sniffed the air. That was when her eyes widened in alarm as she looked at her feet.

Mari barely had enough time to take a deep breath before a cloud of dark green gas emerged from the sewers bellow her. Not daring to open her mouth or even her eyes, she quickly grabbed her necklace and accessed the speed of a cheetah before taking off in an abrupt blur of motion. Only when she put a safe distance between herself and the poison gas her nose warned her about did she looked back and what she saw made her jaw drop in disbelief.

The poisonous mist started to compress and it took the shape of an intimidating bald man. He tilted his head in his direction and the utter lack of emotion in his face snapped her out of her shock.

"Damn, that's new," Vixen muttered and started to run again when he turned back into lethal gas.

The woman cursed when she soon realized that even with her feline boost of speed the deadly mist was still gaining upon her. Making a snap decision at an intersection she turned left, only to realize the street had a tall fence for a dead-end. Concerned, she quickly switched to drawing into the powers of the eagle to fly over the obstacle but by then the ominous mist was almost upon her.

She took a deep breath while she still could when, suddenly, her enhanced hearing picked up a nearby voice in a language she couldn't identify.

"_De cruinne-ce agus akasha seall me do solas_!" Said a male voice with what was clearly a British accent.

As if on cue, a whirlwind was unexpectedly formed right in the middle of the poison gas, dispersing the substance and forcing it to reform into the bald man Mari had seen earlier. Only then did she get a good look at his face and she couldn't stop the shiver down her spine. The gaze of the bald man was completely white and for lack of better termâ€¦empty.

The man was trying to get back on his feet but that was when a rock slammed his head and it knocked him out cold. Mari slowly landed back on the floor, feeling wary as she stared at the dark corner of the alley.

"If you don't want to get a good idea of what it's like to be disembowel by a lion, I suggest you show yourself and tell me what the hell is going on," She hissed, ready to switch animal powers at a moment's notice.

"Now, now," Said the British voice from the shadows. "Is that any way to talk to the one who just saved you from suffocating?"

"I had it under control," Mari said stubbornly.

"Most likely," The man acknowledged, with an unseen shrug before she noticed him crushing a cigarette under his shoes. "But I wasn't about to take unnecessary chances, my dear Vixen." He added as he stepped into the light.

Tensing at the mention of her superhero name without her suit on, Mari quickly studied him with her eyes, from his cocky smirk to his brown trench coat and quickly deduced she wouldn't need her wolf-like nose to figure out that the Brit smelled like trouble. Still, she needed answers.

"Who or what is that guy?" Mari asked firmly as she pointed at the unconscious gas in human form.

"That," The Brit said as he nodded towards the motionless figure, "is a metahuman from Central City. His name is Kyle Nimbus and before he got his powers, he was a death row inmate. Unfortunately, he recently escaped the secret metahuman prison where The Flash was holding him."

Mari blinked, vaguely remembering something about a secret jail for metahumans in her conversations with Flash and Arrow last month. "Are you a member of Flash's support team?"

The Brit scoffed at the idea, then chuckled. "Not at all, darling. I may have been trying to learn all I could about the Central City metahumans for a while now, but I am not usually a team player." He pause, then added, "We have an acquaintance in common though, and I am on good terms with him."

He then frowned for a moment of consideration before shrugging. "Or at least I was, last time I checked. Been a dog's age since I last talked with him."

"Who?" Mari asked with a raised eyebrow.

"Oh, just a guy that likes to jump from rooftop to rooftop," He said with a smirk. "Runs around in a green suit and puts arrows into scumbags. Rings a bell?"

Mari just nodded, not relaxing her stance in the slightest. "And you are?"

The Brit gave her an annoying wink before bowing dramatically. "My name is John Constantine, Miss McCabe. Or would you prefer that I call you Vixen?"

Mari was starting to feel like a predator backed into a corner. Her base instincts were telling her to lash out at the man who had somehow discovered her secret identity. Then she remembered the sudden whirlwind that allowed the Brit to knock out her hunter and narrowed her eyes. Nodding to herself almost imperceptibly, she became convince that the man before her could use magic. She was going to have to tread carefully.

"Vixen is fine," The woman ended up replying as she crossed her arms. "Now, tell me why you are here, _Constantine_," She pressed.

"Straight to the point," He said with amusement. "I like that."

Then his face turned grim all of the sudden as he turned to the unconscious metahuman. "I came here to confirm a theory. And it looks like I was right."

Mari waited for him to look back at her. When he did, all traces of cockiness and humor were gone from his expression, making her feel uneasy. "There is a new, dangerous player on the board," John declared. "And whoever it is, hunting down the few magic users of considerable power that are left in this country is in his agenda."

Mari's eyes automatically looked down towards her magic totem before a feeling of dread washed over her. "Is that why the metahuman's eyes were soâ€¦empty?" She emphasized.

"You bet," Constantine said with a nod. "His mind was being controlled from afar."

There was a tense silence as she processed that. Then she sighed and took the bait. "What now, then?"

"Now," John said slowly. "You get to decide. You can chose to remain here in Detroit and continue your heroic activities despite the fact there will be more hunters to follow."

"Orâ€¦?"

"Or, you can help me take this poisonous wanker all the way to Central City," The Brit declared. "I am being hunted too so I don't want to deal with that and the possibility that Nimbus might suffocate us while we are distracted. At least the Flash has a prison that can hold him where I can safely interrogate him and while I am not usually a team player, having the Scarlet Speedster on our corner wouldn't hurt if we get attacked again."

Mari pondered her options in silence. She may have only felt the danger from the metahuman shortly before his chase but she got a much stronger jolt in her senses about an hour earlier. About that time, she saw in the news that some strange hole appeared above Central City and started sucking building parts before abruptly fading out of existence. Biting on her bottom lip, she realized it couldn't be a coincidence.

She looked beyond towards her city before sighing in resignation. She tapped into her totemic powers to gain the strength of a gorilla before picking up the unconscious metahuman and effortlessly carrying the heavier man around her back. "Let's hurry."

"Good choice," He said in a pleased tone. "This way," He added as he left the alley.

Silently swearing to return as soon as possible, Vixen followed John Constantine towards Central City in order to meet a certain speedsterâ€¦completely unaware of the fact that the Flash is accompanied by a certain super powered alien these days.

>Hope you like the new developments! Sorry for the lack of Karry but this chapter was important set up the plotline of the antagonist. Now for those that don't know, John Constantine is a demon hunter from DC that had his own show on NBC before it got cancelled and Constantine was allowed to crossover into the Arrow-verse in the 5th* episode of Arrow's Season 4. Vixen had an animated series set in the Arrow-verse around the time of the episodes 16-17 of the season 1 and 3 of The Flash and Arrow but she made the transition to live action in the 15*th* episode of Arrow Season 4. Hope you like their inclusion to the plotline, even if they won't be main characters really.

If you enjoyed the chapter, remember to review! They fuel my motivation and therefore my will to write. Until next time!

4. Chapter 4: Back Home

Chapter 4: Back Home

I want to thank everyone for the positive reception once more. You guys rock!

Last chapter may have been interesting with the new additions to the plotline but there was a serious lack of Karry back then. I tried to rectify that in this one but the extra stuff I meant to include got deleted my Word malfunctioned or something. I really need to get a new laptop but oh well, here is at least a little more content for now. Enjoy!

>The bolts of lightning raced across the streets of Central City. Just above the streaks, a resilient red cape was flapping intensely with the wind once it got exposed to a sonic boom without harm. Just under a minute later, the trail stopped inside a cozy residence. Barry wasted no time in removing his Flash mask and smiled as he took in the living room.

"Home sweet home," He said as he went to put down the Coast City pizza on the dining table.

"Mm-hmm," Kara agreed as she opened her backpack to get out the clothes she was going to put over her Supergirl outfit. "It looks nice," She said as she looked around before her eyes settled on some family pictures.

Smiling softly, she took one and approached Barry. "Your family looks happy here," She remarked.

"Yeah," He said with a nod as he remembered the day. "That was my last birthday party before I became the Flash."

"On this Earth, you mean," Kara told her boyfriend with a playful grin.

Barry laughed. "Right, how could I forget? Winn certainly outdid himself that evening."

Kara giggled in amusement as she thought back to the past month. "I still can't believe we partied hard enough for Alex to get drunk. Ever since she joined the DEO she hardly ever hangs out just for fun anymore."

"I guess we were all in the mood to celebrate," Barry noted as he winked at his girlfriend. "Especially in the after party."

Kara blushed slightly as she subconsciously played with her hair. "Well, it was your first birthday without your family. I wanted you to have a special night to remember."

Barry got closer as he smiled at her with affection before giving his loving girlfriend a quick peck in the lips. "Mission accomplished," He added before hugging her tightly.

Kara knows that she is extremely strong and really tough but every time that Barry hold her like that she just melts into his arms. She hummed happily as they just stand there, enjoying the moment. Eventually, she opened her eyes but didn't pulled away. "Thank you so much."

"For what?" Barry asked softly.

"For proving me wrong," She revealed as she rested her head on his shoulder and her heartbeat accelerated. "Soulmates do exist and mine is right here."

Barry inhaled deeply at that admission. "I love you too, Kara Danvers."

They stayed like that, just enjoying the close presence of one another and the inner peace it brought them. But then the moment ended when the phone of the house started ringing. Kara snorted at the annoying sound as Barry threw her an apologetic glance before picking it up.

"Hello?"

"Hi Barry," Said a familiar voice.

Despite himself, Barry couldn't help but grin. "Oliver!" He said pleasantly surprised. "Great to hear your voice."

"Likewise," He said through the phone. "Listen, I am just calling to give you the heads up."

"About what?" Barry asked his vigilante friend, starting to get worried.

"Remember Mari McCabe?"

"The Vixen?" Barry asked as he raised an eyebrow. "Sure."

"Well, she was attacked by Kyle Nimbus," Oliver explained.

"The Mist tried to kill her?" Barry asked in alarm.

"Tried and failed," The vigilante stressed. "Luckily, one of my old allies from before I became the Arrow happened to be there at the time and helped her deal with the poisonous metahuman. They are heading to Central City right now to let you put him in your metahuman prison. Thought I should let you know."

"Thanks," Barry responded. "I'll alert everyone at S.T.A.R. Labs. What's the name of your old friend?"

"John Constantine," Oliver replied. "Oh and Barry, remember how Mari's totem was the real deal, magically speaking?"

"Yeah," Barry said slowly as he frowned. "I am still having a hard time getting used to the idea that magic is legit, though."

"Most of it isn't," Oliver told him. "I have seen enough about John in action to know that he is not a fraud, however." He pause for a moment then added, "You know how I am more of an expert than you when it comes to fighting crime with a bow and arrow while you are more of an expert than me when it comes to dealing with metahumans?"

"Right," Barry conceded.

"Well, keep in mind that Constantine is much more of an expert on magical topics than either one of us," Arrow said.

"Why are you telling me this, exactly?" The speedster asked with curiosity.

"Something is wrong with Nimbus," Oliver said after a while. "He was mind controlled into attacking Vixen. So, John wants to interrogate him once he is restrained in your pipeline to determine if whatever took control of him was magical in nature and if so, hunt the cause at its source."

"In other words," He continued. "Remember he has more experience when it comes to dealing with this kind of thing than us. Let him do his thing, even if it seem strange to scientists like you."

"All right, thanks for the tip," Barry said with a nod. "Now, how have you been?"

Oliver laughed. "Believe it or not, I am taking a vacation with Felicity."

"Really?" Barry said with a growing grin as he looked back at his girlfriend. "Didn't you tell me once that heroes like us don't get the girl?"

Kara rolled her eyes at the comment before blowing her boyfriend a kiss.

"I was wrong," He admitted.

"Have to agree with you there," Barry chuckled. "I am not single anymore."

"Huh. Anyone I know?"

"No, but one of these days you can be sure I will introduce her to you and Felicity," Barry said, grinning in Kara's direction.

Oliver paused as he analyzed his friend's tone of voice.

"She knows who you are," He stated instead of asking.

"And I know who she is," Barry added with a knowing smirk.

Silence took over the telephone line, implications heavy on the air.

"I agree," Oliver finally said. "We should get together one of these days."

"I am sure you'll like her."

"If you were saying what I think you were saying, probably, yeah," The Arrow recognized. "Well, nice hearing from you, Barry."

"Take care, Oliver."

"You too," The Starling City vigilante added before hanging up.

Barry looked down at the cellphone with a pondering expression for a few moments, his stare lingering.

"What's wrong?" Kara asked.

"Nothing," Barry said as he looked back at his girlfriend. "I just realized that Oliver thinks the last time he saw me was 3 nights ago but for me it has been several months instead."

"Weird change of perception when you think about it, I guess," Kara noted.

"Oh well," He said after a sigh, "make yourself comfortable," Barry offered. "I am going to change into something less red."

"I don't know if I am okay with that," Kara grinned playfully. "You always look great in red."

The speedster chuckled before heading to his room in the second floor of the house. Kara eyes followed the stairs for a moment longer before she smiled to herself in delight. Now, the vacation she talked about with her amazing boyfriend could finally begin.

Little did she knew in that moment of happiness that their plans were going to be interruptedâ€¦by darkness.
